Why do I need ISO 9001:2008?

When an organisation works against a set standard, potential customers know and understand that this provides a significant advantage for them should they purchase their products and services. Customers can expect service delivery in line with internationally expected standards and they know that there are mechanisms in place for them to engage the service provider should there be anything they are unhappy or in disagreement with and that these mechanisms require a resolution to such problems.

As ISO calls for continuous improvement potential customers have the ease of mind that previously encountered problems would have been resolved through a formal mechanism and as such you as a provider would have grown significantly over time with regards to delivering a quality product.

You as the organisation wishing to sell a product or service or wishing to prove to any legislative or other authority that you are doing what can be expected of the reasonable person to do, will therefore have a significant advantage.

ISO can be a cost effective addition to any organisation. It is not the cost of implementing ISO but the cost of not doing so that should be the concern.

How long does it take?

It is probably much quicker than you think. Depending on the size of the organisation it could take as little as 30 days. When integrated with the Isoglo Integrated Management System (IMS) the additional time to implement can be even less.

Be aware that implementing ISO is NOT a quick fix. It is neither a quick (just a few days as some will say) system to implement NOR does it provide an overnight solution to your problems.

Isoglo will implement a system that is user friendly, easy to maintain and audit and implementation will be time efficient and cost effective.

What will it cost?

ISO can be a cost effective addition to any organisation. It is not the cost of implementing ISO but the cost of not doing so that should be the concern.

The cost will depend on the size of the organisation and the work involved. Isoglo will however provide a competitively priced product for its service.

Our approach ensures a sustainable, cost effective product with little or no maintenance cost. Isoglo is however available to provide a maintenance service should our customers prefer this approach.

What will you get?

Our proven method combines the task of conducting the gap analyses, developing and implementing the system and preparing the Manual at the same time.

We wish to stress that we are INDEPENDENT from the certification authority, i.e. we don't implement a system which we audit ourselves

(unfortunately a very dangerous trend that is becoming apparent in the industry). You will be audited by a completely independent organisation. You are welcome to select the certification body yourself or, if you wish, we can assist in doing so and include the cost thereof in our quote.

This independence means we HAVE to do things right or you will not get certificated and thus listed. We will therefore loose financially.

What's involved?

Our consultants examine the activities of your business that directly affect quality and identify the short comings (gaps) that need to be addressed. Where necessary, a programme will be developed and agreed on to rectify areas of non-compliance. This assessment normally takes between one and five days depending on the size and complexity of the organisation.

On successful completion of the assessment, we will assist the organisation to build the system, develop the manual and do everything that is required for certification (ISO 9001) and listing with the relevant certification authority.

Why use ISOGLO?

We believe in the Keep it Short, Simple (KISS) approach to ISO implementation and certification. We eliminate the jargon, red tape often associated, but we COMPLY with the rules.
